How To Bathe

I CAN almost hear protests from readers as soon as they have finished that line "How to Bathe." Of course they know how to bathe, they say—and so they do, but there are

Rest and relax a few minutes after your daily tub, to freshen the face and make yourself pretty several ways of taking baths, and I am only going to tell of one of the best.

Now, having decided to go over herself thoroughly, giving herself a beauty housecleaning, so to speak, the woman must pay special attention to this item of bathing. Merely washing face and hands thoroughly will not keep her skin clear, she must cleanse her body all over once each day, at least.

The most ordinary sort of bath is the "warm" one. For this, the water is between 90 and 95 degrees Fahrenheit. It is the best sort, really, for cold baths and very hot baths both draw strength from the body.

Draw the tub fairly full of water. Step in, rubbing the body all over with the lather of a good bath soap. Rub the hands over the skin, working the lather into the pores. Rinse off thoroughly, with a sponge if you like. The sudr neutralized and cut the oils on the skin, the warm water opens the pores, the warmth draws fresh blood to the skin, and relaxes the tensed muscles.

Rub with a large, fairly rough towel—Turkish towels are best. You can finish the bath with a cold shower with good results—unless you have been feeling tired; but this is a matter of custom and convenience. Never dress till the skin is quite dry—and, if possible, lie down a few moments after bathing. The continued relaxing of the muscles will start you off again feeling like a new soul.

So, clean inside and out, you can turn your attention to other little details of the toilette that make for permanent beauty.

Questions and Answers

I have two gold teeth already in the front of my mouth and find I must have still another taken out and a false one put in. Gold teeth are not pretty. What would look best?—Miss W. Z.

Reply—You can have a tooth made to match the shade of your other teeth, costing less than a gold tooth. You can have enamel teeth put in where the gold ones are, improving the appearance of your mouth.

My eyelashes are fairly long and thick, and dark enough to suit me, but I wish they would curl. My eyes are blue and round, curling lashes would look very well on me.—J. S. K.

Reply—Run your eyebrow brush under them with your eyes closed, and brush them upwards. This will encourage their growth and give them that tendency to curl that you admire.
